

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. What public interest is being served by this so called documentary? There are many soldiers who were helped by what John Kerry did during that time. People forget that the Vietnam War was proven to be a mess. The airing of this "documentary" has nothing to do with what sort of a President John Kerry would be, it is appalling that the airways are being forced to show it. - so much for democracy.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
Sincerely,
